Judge Woods has held office for over twenty years and drawn over $100,000 in salary. Isn't that enough? What is the use to give a life tenure? Can't another fill the place as good or better? Think it over for yourself.

Last week the editor of the Bedford Inquirer stuck his nose in the air and snuffed and puffed and blowed like a giraffe trying to climb the moon. The Bedford Inquirer has been hanging under a lawsuit for over a year and we never heralded the fact to the four winds. We left it take its course. That was the most gentlemanly course to take, we think, but the Bedford Inquirer can't even wait until a suit is brought. We wish to state that the editor has been perfectly educated in yellow journalism in Philadelphia and there is where he should be.

Wednesday night closed the first day of the three days' convention of the Pennsylvania Electrical Association with about 400 members present. Prominent electricians from all over the State are here.

A splendid program had been arranged for each day. Wednesday's program called for auto-tours, golf tournaments (for ladies and men), bowling, tennis, swimming contests, moving pictures, dancing, etc. Besides the regular program the Association had secured local talent to give a concert. This was a real treat for all. Each number was performed in an artistic manner. The duets by Miss Louise Stiver (contralto) and Cloyd Doty (baritone) could not have been excelled by amateurs and they received great applause and expressions of appreciation from the many listeners who are cultured in music. Miss Lillian Mock gave two fine readings; the expression and impersonating in both were without fault. These numbers did not fail to bring applause from the crowd. Miss Margaret Stiver was piano accompanist for the reading and singing. The program was ended by George Geahard and Addene LeVerene, both professional comedians and dancers from New York City.

The program for Thursday and Friday are similar.

We must not fail to mention the wonderful displays of electrical manufacturers and inventions of the different places in the United States. Sewing machines, sweepers, smoothing irons, cook stoves, lights, derricks, cranes and motors of all kinds. Perhaps the one that appeals the most is the automatic range. This is so arranged that you can put anything in the oven or on top, turn on the current, set the clock to alarm any time you wish it to stop cooking. When the clock alarms the heat is automatically turned off. These inventions are great and everybody says the greatest field is before them and they are all enthusiastic in the work.

The whole convention is interesting and instructive and is considered by all the best ever held in Pennsylvania.

The hotel is serving everybody in the most efficient manner and all report the happy time of their lives.

Deceased was twice married—his first wife, Eliza Fisher Decker, died in 1901, and his second wife, Mary A. Morse Decker, died August 9, 1915. Two daughters and two sons, one of whom is L. W. Decker of West Providence Township, survive.

Thomas Amick

THOMAS FISHER BAILEY FOR PRESIDENT JUDGE

A Sketch of Thos. F. Bailey

Thomas Fisher Bailey was born in Huntingdon, a son of the late Judge John M. Bailey who presided over these courts with distinction from January 1st, 1896, until his death in September 1903. He was educated in the Common Schools and at Princeton College, graduating with the class of 1894. After being graduated, he took up the study of law in his father's office, where he assiduously applied himself to his chosen profession, and was admitted to the bar July 11, 1896.

Mr. Bailey was married to Wilhelmina Lentz, and has one daughter, Elizabeth. He is one of the trustees of the Presbyterian Church of Huntingdon, a teacher of the Men's Bible Class, and has always taken an interest in the general welfare of Huntingdon.

Mr. Bailey, the Business Man

Mr. Bailey is a man of broad public spirit and lends his efforts cheerfully, and contributes liberally of his means to the advancement of every enterprise promising of benefit to the community at large. His career, one of perseverance and enterprise, is indeed worthy of commendation and should serve as an example to young men who are ambitious and desire to succeed in the business world. Never shirking a duty and never before seeking an honor, he is ever ready to give support and encouragement to all undertakings that have for their objects the elevation and advancement of mankind and the growth and prosperity of his native town. Mr. Bailey is a member of the Huntingdon School Board, a trustee of the J. C. Blair Memorial Hospital and is associated with other business enterprises of the town and county.

Mr. Bailey, the Lawyer

As a lawyer and advocate, Mr. Bailey is careful, earnest and thoroughly devoted to the cause of his clients. With a mind well stored with legal knowledge and possessed of a clear and discriminating judgment, he is a valuable and trustworthy counsellor and a strong and able advocate. He is faithful in all things. He possesses a critical acumen, a sound judgment, keen powers of analysis and in the trial and argument of cases in the lower and appellate courts, he has displayed ripe learning and ability. His talents, industry and the care with which he conducted what business fell to his hands has earned him a large clientele. His legal services have been sought by the business man, farmer and laborer in both criminal and civil courts and he is recognized as the ablest lawyer in this Judicial District.

Mr. Bailey Will Refuse Licenses

Temperance agitation in the State has been rife for many years. The people of the various counties have risen in 2rms and in no uncertain way have demanded that licenses be refused. The courts of a number of counties have respected the opinions of the remonstrants and as a result there are a number of dry counties in Pennsylvania. The license court of Huntingdon County, in 1913, hearing the petition for and the remonstrance against the various applications for licenses, taking into consideration the number and character for and against such applications, refused all the applicants except the one at Orbisonia, against which application no remonstrance had been filed. The next year, the people, knowing the power they had if alive to the situation, came into court with an overwhelming remonstrance and Huntingdon County was placed in the dry column. This is judicial local option, just what was intended by the law and we know Mr. Bailey well enough to affirm that the wishes of the people will be respected.

In a letter announcing his candidacy Mr. Bailey says, "I believe that the several communities have a right to say whether a license is necessary or not by the petition for and the remonstrance against it. If a community through its best and most substantial citizens, having regard to the number, remonstrate against the granting of license, I will take this to mean that the license is not regarded as necessary and I will refuse it." We know Mr. Bailey well enough to know that he will do just what he says. We know this county and district well enough to know that a vast majority of the people are against licensing hotels and Mr. Bailey will respect the sentiment of the people.

A Non-Partisan Ballot

The Legislature several years ago took the selection of Judges out of politics, so when you go to the polls September 21st you will be handed a non-partisan ballot on which will be printed the names of all the candidates for President Judge. The party affiliations of the several candidates for this office will not be stated. The law provides that if no candidate receives 51 per cent. of the votes cast the two securing the largest vote will go on the ballot to be voted for at the November election. Place an (X) after the name of THOMAS F. BAILEY.

Vote for Thos. F. Bailey

Huntingdon County presents to the voters of the 20th Judicial District, Thos. F. Bailey of Huntingdon, as a man eminently fitted for this important position. He has a judicial temperament, a legal mind, business judgment, is honest, courageous and fearless and Huntingdon County people know as does every other person who knows Mr. Bailey, that every man, rich or poor, will receive at his hands a correct interpretation of the law.

We believe in Tom Bailey. We trust him and we want the people of this district to help make him Judge. Practically the entire Huntingdon County bar are for him; the business men of the community believe that they will receive at his hands a square deal, that their causes will be quickly and legally determined and that the decision will be respected when rendered; the workmen believe in his integrity and are for him; the church people believe that he will carry out the mandates of the law, and will take delight in elevating him to the position so admirably filled by his father.

All citizens should be interested in the election of President Judge, as we are all at some time or another affected by the character of the man who presides over our courts.

Vote for THOMAS F. BAILEY.

Mrs. Jacob T. Anderson

Death has entered our community and removed one of our beloved citizens. Mrs. Ann Maria Anderson, whose death was noted in last week's issue. She had been suffering for a long time with dropsy, but only recently were indications that death was so great, but she always wore a smile and never murmured.

A daughter of William and Mary Miller she was born near Cessna on February 10, 1841, and died September 1, 1915, at the advanced age of 74 years, six months and 21 days.

Her life was a useful one. Her place in the home, in the community, and the church, to which she was devoted, will be missed. She spent fifty-four years in married life. Four years ago, February 13, 1911, she with her husband celebrated their golden wedding anniversary which was a remarkable event of their life.

Besides her husband, three sons and five daughters are left to mourn their loss: Frank of Listonburg, George and John of Cessna, Adda, wife of J. E. Foreman of Pittsburgh; Mrs. Bertha Bittinger of Bedford, Margaret, wife of William Fickes of Osterburg, and Misses Nettie and Mollie at home. She is also survived by two brothers: James Miller of Wolsburg, John Miller of Defiance, and twenty grandchildren and two great-granddaughters.

The funeral service was conducted in the Lutheran Church Friday morning by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Zinn. He preached his sermon from 1 Cor. 15: 55-58. The service was very largely attended. Many beautiful flowers were presented, tokens of the esteem in which she was held by her friends and neighbors. By her request she was carried to her last resting place in the Lutheran Cemetery by six grandsons: Charles Bittinger, Harry Anderson, Carl Fickes, Clarence, Alfred and Robert Anderson.

Wedding Bells

On Tuesday, September 7, there was a most delightful wedding celebration at the home of John Smouse, near Bedford, the father of the bride, at which John A. Evans of Llanerch, Pa., and Mrs. Ethel M. Diehl were united in holy wedlock by Rev. A. B. Miller of Bedford, pastor of the Smouse family.

After partaking of a sumptuous wedding feast, the young couple boarded the southbound train, mid a storm of rice, for a wedding tour, after which they will reside at Llanerch, where the groom is an extensive contractor and builder, and whither the best wishes of their many friends accompany them.—(Philadelphia papers please copy.)

Bedford Young Man to Preach on Sunday

The pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Rev. Faus, will upon next Sabbath exchange pulpits with Rev. Ellis B. Davidson of Riddlesburg. As Rev. Davidson is a native of Bedford and a young minister of promise in the conference, he should be greeted in his home town with large audiences.

Bedford County Fair

Members of the Board of Directors of the Bedford County Agricultural Society are putting forth their best efforts to make the Fair this year the best ever held. Indications promise that the exhibits in all departments will be of the best. Three bands—the Boy Scout Band, Osterburg and Bedford—have been secured to furnish music for the week. There will be five aeroplane flights, and the amusements will be good. On account of the increased expense to which the directors have been put and the State appropriation being lessened, they have been compelled to raise the entrance fee to 50 cents. With the proper encouragement from the public, Fair Week can be made a gala week, which we anticipate it will be.

Commissioners Erect Tablet

Our present members of Board of County Commissioners have done a commendable act by having a small marble slab placed over the front door of the Court House, giving the date when the building was erected and the builders' name. It is astonishing the numerous persons who visit this town that ask these questions, and for their benefit, as well as for the knowledge of our own citizens, this little stone was put up. It was designed by G. C. Hawkins, the dates being taken from the Annals of Bedford County, written by Hon. William P. Schell.

Catarrh caused by a germ.

How to Destroy the Germ and End Disease.

To cure catarrh so it won't come back you must, according to a noted authority, first drive from your body the millions of germs that are flourishing in the inner recesses of your nose and throat and are causing the disease.

There is a preparation which does this called Hyomei (pronounced High-o-mei). Hyomei is a germ killing vaporized air formed from the purest oil of Eucalyptus combined with other healing and antiseptic ingredients. You breathe Hyomei through the mouth and nose by means of a little hard rubber inhaler which druggists furnish with it. This medicated germicidal air penetrates into every fold and crevice of the mucous membrane of your nose and throat, kills the catarrh germs that lodge there, soothes, reduces and heals the swollen inflamed membranes, stops the discharge and opens up the clogged nose and air passages in a truly wonderful way. F. W. Jordan, Jr., and many other leading druggists in Bedford and vicinity sell Hyomei with the positive guarantee that it must cure catarrh or that the money paid for it will be refunded. —Adv. 3 Sept. 21.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Interesting Notes From Our Correspondent at National Capital.

Washington, D. C., September 7.—Abundant precedents exist in the history of our diplomatic relations to demand the recall of Dr. M. Constantin Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador, for his attempts to interfere in the internal affairs of the United States. It is said on excellent authority, however, that while President Wilson is thoroughly dissatisfied with Dr. Dumba, unless all present indications fail he will not hand him his passports. The administration appears to be satisfied that by merely sending Dr. Dumba back to Vienna no particularly useful purpose would be served, but that the action in itself might add to the tension that now exists between the United States and the Teutonic allies.

Official Washington received the news of the torpedoing of the Allan liner Hesperian by a German submarine with unconcealed surprise, though there was none of the grave anxiety that followed the sinking of the Arabic. Beyond the belief that the German government would be forced to make some statement with regard to the destruction of the Hesperian, no conclusions have been reached as to the effect the incident will have on the relations between the United States and Germany and the submarine controversy generally. Over Labor Day the government offices were closed. What few indications there were of opinion in official quarters led to the belief that the administration will welcome any fact which tends to show that it was not a torpedo which caused the sinking of the Hesperian. In spite of the Hesperian's captain that his ship was the victim of a torpedo and had no warning, high officials here are not disposed to question the good faith of recent unqualified assurances from the German government that her submarine commanders had been ordered to attack no more liners without warning.

All United States troops on the Mexican border are under orders to be in readiness to meet any emergency. War Department officials said extraordinary vigilance had been ordered as a result of repeated raids in American territory by Mexican brigands and soldiers and renewed reports of preparation for an organized invasion from across the Rio Grande. Eliseo Arredondo, Washington representative of General Carranza, has made public a dispatch from his chief emphatically denying that Carranza's troops had taken any part in the disturbances along the Texas border. In his announcement Mr. Arredondo urged that the United States government inquire carefully into the origin of the border troubles, and intimated that they were instigated by Americans.

The apparent conflict between Rome and Washington dispatches regarding Pope Benedict's peace message to President Wilson is regarded here as resting solely over whether the Pope actually addressed a personal message to the President.

Try This If Hair Starts Falling

At this season of the year many people find their hair coming out at an alarming rate and often fear baldness. This may very easily be the ultimate result if proper scalp treatment is not taken at once. All excessive loss of hair can be almost immediately stopped by the use of a little Parisian Sage which invigorates and nourishes the slowly dying hair roots into a renewal of healthy normal action. New hair quickly grows on the thin spots, old hair stops falling and the difference is apparent in a few days by the very look of the hair itself taking on new life, lustre and beauty. Parisian Sage can be obtained from F. W. Jordan, Jr., or any good druggist. It is not expensive. —Adv. 10 Sep 21

dinal Gibbons, on his visit to the White House last Thursday, said he had delivered a message from the Pope to the President, but could not divulge its contents. It was learned that the message which came as a cablegram from Rome, addressed to the cardinal, contained congratulations of Pope Benedict to President Wilson for his efforts on behalf of peace, and expressed the views of the vatican, which are well known. In Catholic circles here it is believed the vatican intended Cardinal Gibbons should express to the President what he knew of the pontiff's position. No optimistic views are entertained in administration circles that peace in Europe is near as a result of this message.

As a result of a controversy between John Brisben Walker, the New York editor and economist, and Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federal of Labor, which has its headquarters here, it has come to light that officers of the federation have been in almost uninterrupted communication with the representatives of organized workers of the countries now engaged in war. Mr. Gompers declared that when the time shall have become ripe for any decisive movement to be made in the interest of peace, all may rest assured that no effort will be left untaken to accomplish peace.

Larger appropriations will have to be made at the next session of Congress for the work of the State Department, which practically has doubled on account of the European war. Representative Flood of Virginia, chairman of the House foreign affairs committee, says that if this country is to keep peace with the situation that has developed abroad, if it is to keep abreast of all that is going on confidentially in the various capitals of Europe, and know what other governments of Europe should know about what their neighboring governments are doing, the appropriation of $400,000 must at least be doubled for the emergency fund.

President Wilson may face a crisis in his cabinet when the question of preparedness is taken up, is the belief in political circles and the accepted explanation for the delay in giving to the country the details of Secretary Garrison's plans for reorganization of the army and formulation of a defensive military policy, which was submitted two weeks ago. It is declared by some that the same influence which impeded the President's progress in the German exchanges have made it plain that they will not stand quietly by and see a comprehensive military and naval policy put through unless it can be done without material added expense. There is little doubt in the minds of those who know Mr. Garrison that his resignation will follow failure by President Wilson to uphold his War Secretary's hands.

Officers of the United States Navy will be detailed on board the ten submarines recently constructed at the yards of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation for the British government after the boats leave the shipyard, so that all question of the possible removal of the boats to the possession of a belligerent during the present war may be eliminated. Navy Department officials will look into published reports that ten American-built submarines have crossed the Atlantic under their own power and now are with the allied fleets.

A lynching was narrowly averted by a train crew of the Chesapeake Beach Railroad running into Washington when a crowd of white men attempted to inflict vengeance upon a colored man from having slashed a white man in a fight on the train. The train crew with difficulty kept the crowd at bay and protected the colored man during the trip from the beach into the city.

Thousands of Washington's workers from office, shop and home journeyed in every direction Labor Day to celebrate labor's annual festival and the last of the summer holidays. Though some mercantile establishments were open in the forenoon practically every place of business that ordinarily closes on Sundays suspended operations after 1 o'clock and their employees promptly joined the crowds of government clerks and other workers who began their outing earlier in the day. At the Benning race track the American Automobile Association of the District of Columbia staged their first annual meet. Irving C. Barber, in his home-made automobile, easily carried off all the honors of the day, finishing first in every event in which he entered.

President Wilson attended the theater for the first time in many months. He occupied a box, and was accompanied by Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, who recently returned from Cornish; his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, and Secretary, Joseph P. Tumulty.

The Sportsman's Favorite Monthly

The September Sports Afield blooms out as the Grand American Handicap Number, considerable space being given to the great trapshooting tournament held in Chicago last month. But, aside from its splendid write-up of the Grand American Handicap, this old reliable magazine maintains the many sterling attractions which have made it the representative sportsman's journal of the United States. Sunset Camps and Trails presents the usual instalment of sport after game, all the way from ruffed grouse to the lordly moose. In the Land of the Dog is a humorous story of Cowboy Land—of bucking bronchos and their disgusted riders in their efforts to avoid prairie-dog holes. When Dan Cupid Changed from Bow to Gun narrates how two rivals for the heart of a girl settled their fate at the traps. In the Great Mantrap Valley is a delightful account of sport among Minnesota's beautiful lakes. The New Cook of the Bar O Ranch recounts the expedients resorted to by a bunch of Idaho cowboys to acquire something on the ranch which were petticoats. Where Cod Is King treats interestingly of the Newfoundland fisheries. In Around the Campfire the genial Doctor Fort gives us much technical information about camp sanitation, guns, ammunition and rail-bird shooting on the Delaware. An Adventure with Bass will please all fishermen, as will also Salmon Fishing in Idaho, and the many newsy letters about hunting prospects in different sections of the country. Your newsdealer can supply you; if not, send 15 cents to Sports Afield, 542 So. Dearborn St., Chicago, Ill.

MIDDLE AGE

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene by Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, M. D.

For all that has been said to the contrary this is the middle aged man's day. You can talk of the early recognition of competence, of youthful success and what does it all mean but that a man reaches middle age with more years of successful endeavor behind.

A generation or so ago a business man who devoted himself assiduously to golf or tennis would probably have lost his credit at the banks and have been looked at askance by his business associates. Now-a-days there are thousands of successful middle aged business men who regularly devote a certain portion of their time to rational exercise. This is fortunate as conditions have changed, our cities have increased in size and the environment of business is more restricted. Our grandfathers had much open air life thrust upon them; today it must be sought.

Cheeks bronzed from exercise in the open air stamps many a middle aged man as a devotee of rational sports. College athletics are probably responsible for a share of this improvement and public health teaching and a struggle for individual efficiency for the balance.

The man who has succeeded young is perhaps more jealous of his physical powers than one who has plodded on to a middle aged realization of his hopes.

There is a movement for temperance on the part of unnumbered thousands of middle aged men. Temperance in eating, in the use of alcohol and a rational indulgence in exercises which will keep up the physical poise. There are hundreds of country clubs today where there was one twenty-five years ago and it is the middle aged men and not the youngsters who most persistently frequent them. It is well that this is a growing movement for it will aid in offsetting the increasing mortality from degenerative diseases.

The pressure of life and the struggle for existence is growing keener and it behooves the man who has reached the noon-day of life to give serious consideration to his physical well being if he wishes to hold his place in the harness.

Chlorine.

Chlorine, which in its liquid form the Germans are said to be using in their poison bombs, owes its discovery as an element, as well as its name, to a British scientist, Humphrey Davy. It was in 1810 that he found the mysterious gas to be undecomposable into other elements. Should we decide to flatter the Germans by imitating them there would be no difficulty in finding the chlorine. The earth and the sea are full of it, in the form of salt. It would indeed be difficult not to find chlorine—in one or other of its combinations—wherever one tried, in earth, air or water; but it would be impossible to find it anywhere except in alliance with another element. Workmen who split up common salt—chlorine of sodium—in order to get the chlorine grow fat in the process, but as a set-off their teeth decay.—London Chronicle.

Resurrecting a Dead Battery.

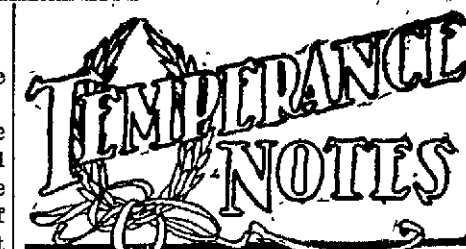

A clock having an electric contact stopped with the contact closed, so that when it was started up a couple of hours later, the battery was so far polarized that it could not operate the magnet to which it was connected. To wait till the battery could recuperate would mean leaving the mechanism out of use for some hours. The battery consisted of three Leclanche cells. Five dry cells were brought in to use. Connected in series, the terminal wires were touched to the terminals of the exhausted battery, zinc to zinc and carbon to carbon. After 30 seconds of this reverse current the battery was fully restored and ready for business.

Mexican Mountains.

The Mexican mountains are mainly of underlying granite formation. The Jurassic, Cretaceous and Tertiary ages rocks are much in evidence throughout the country, while the highest ranges, as we have seen, are of volcanic origin. The singular plains of Yucatan are largely of calcareous formation, probably a Tertiary limestone. One of the most plentiful rocks over vast areas of Mexico, and that which forms the striking variation of scenery, is the mountain limestone, the excessively hard stratified crystalline rock of the Lower Cretaceous period.

Magnets for Mine Detection.

Magnetic attraction is now being applied, more or less experimentally, to the detection of mines laid at sea. An electro-magnet, supported on a long arm extending forward from a ship's bow, can be made to signal the presence of a mine. Could the current be made strong enough to deflect a torpedo, another terror of the deep would gradually disappear.—London Daily Chronicle.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED.

The liquor interests have unwittingly given prohibition in West Virginia much valuable publicity. Their frantic efforts to prove that a deficit in the state treasury is due to the loss of liquor revenue has called forth from loyal citizens of the "little mountain state" strong testimonials on the subject. In the light of the moral, social and economic benefits derived from the prohibitory law, testified to by men of every class, a deficiency of a few thousand dollars seems of comparatively little importance.

As a matter of fact the loss of the $600,000 a year in revenue to West Virginia as a result of the adoption of the constitutional prohibition amendment does not impose upon the individual taxpayer any burden worth considering. In a letter written by the state auditor, which has recently been made public, he shows that five cents additional state taxes on the hundred-dollar valuation will take care of the money loss on liquor licenses. This would cost a man whose property was assessed at $1,000, fifty cents; if he has $2,000 worth, he would have to pay one dollar, and if he had $10,000, he would be obliged to expend five dollars. So much for the enormous load of taxation being thrust upon the property owners of the state because of prohibition! The payment of such insignificant amounts would certainly appeal to a level-headed business man as a mighty good investment.

DRINKERS' DEATH RATE HIGH.

Startling evidence of the effect of alcohol on the moderate drinkers is offered by the Life Extension Institute. The bulletin issued to its members shows that in one Canadian and three British life insurance companies the mortality among so-called moderate drinkers, accepted as temperate and healthy risks, exceeded the death rate among the abstainers by 78, 37, 52 and 44 per cent, respectively.

New data was recently compiled by forty-three American life insurance companies, covering a period of twenty-five years, with the following results: Steady moderate drinkers, accepted as standard risks, death rate 86 per cent above the average. Former drinkers (admitting past excesses), death rate 50 per cent above the average. Very moderate drinkers, 18 per cent above the average.

"Experimental laboratory work," says the board of scientific authorities, "has kept pace with statistical investigation, and the knowledge gained from the laboratory, not only in experiments on animals, but on man himself, shows that a higher death rate among alcohol users is what we would naturally expect to find in the light of what we know regarding its effects on the body."

POOR OLD JOHN.

John Barleycorn the swaggering, just now is badly staggering beneath repeated blows; for kings say, "He is ruinous—dog-dag the stuff he's brewed in us," and buff him on the nose. The kings, alert and vigorous, are taking measures rigorous, to swat old John again: "He's worse than guns and sabers are," remark the kings, "his labors are addressed to drowning men. Out where our flags are shimmering the bottle must go glimmering, it makes the soldier rude; it spoils the ardent warrior, and nothing could be sorer than fighting men half stewed." Thus speak the Lord's appointed ones, and they are the appointed ones their people's weal to guard; they see that John, the lecherous, is vicious, mean and treacherous, and so they soak him hard. And if, in Europe's villages, old John, who slays and pillages, runs up against a frost, the war, with all its slaughtering, that leaves the nations tottering, is well worth what it cost.—Walt Mason.

ATTITUDE OF CATHOLIC CHURCH.

"All the great Catholic societies refuse membership to those engaged in the liquor business," says Mr. John F. Cunneen, prominent Catholic and labor leader. "In Maine the Catholics have a majority of the church membership, and you know how Maine stands on the liquor question. In Cambridge, Mass., the Catholic church membership equals 71 per cent of the total church membership, and for 28 years Cambridge has outlawed the saloon. While the Catholic may vote as he pleases upon the saloon question, the church gives him no argument in favor of the saloon. On the contrary, all the arguments are against it. Rev. James E. Cassidy of Fall River, Mass., once said: 'You dare not pray for the saloon.' No Catholic who follows Father Cassidy's advice will vote for the saloon."

INCREASED POPULATION.

We learn from United States census bulletins that of the nine middle western states Kansas, from 1900 to 1910, increased in population 15 per cent; Missouri, 8 per cent; Wisconsin, 12; Nebraska, 11; Indiana, 7; Michigan, 12; Minnesota, 18. In spite of the growth of Chicago, Illinois increased but 17 per cent. Iowa shows an actual loss of 3 per cent. Of the states mentioned, Kansas is the only one that advanced during the ten years in both crops and manufactures.

FASHIONS FOR THE SCHOOLGIRL

Her Suits for Morning and Afternoon, on Norfolk Lines in Tweed or Serge

And A Word On Sport Clothes

New York, September 8.
Vacation's over! The Pattys and Julits and Sallys are coming from everywhere—mountains, shore and far-away homes, with pretty frocks and bright, alert brains ready to absorb all the learning possible between now and next summer. The time has come for Latin, Greek, geometry and incidentally fudge parties, candy pulls and midnight lunches, not included in the regular curriculum, therefore far more fascinating, and, of course, basket-ball and the various other gymnasium stunts to help out the physical and mental machinery.

The Morning Walk
Our streets are gay with them in the early morning; these bright faced happy schoolgirls. They stride by in smart, straight-heeled shoes, Norfolk suits of tweed or serge, set off by chic velvet tams, hats of velour or a softly colored felt. As the days are still bright and warm, one often sees a trim serge frock with bretelles, worn with a blouse of contrasting crepe de Chine, or one of the brightly striped or dotted voiles. Our exclusive schools from again heading the hem of the short, full skirt. With this suit, which was worn one afternoon at a concert, she wore a very simple blouse of baby-flesh pink Georgette crepe. The costume was simplicity itself, but chic, well thought out simplicity.

Top Coats, Sweaters and Gym Clothes

A warm top coat of one of the soft, light-weight coatings brought out this fall, will not come amiss in any schoolgirl's wardrobe; it is the handiest thing in the world to slip on over the one-piece frock of serge, or over the suit for a cross-country walk or a motor trip. Our shops are showing some charmingly colored sweaters too, for the out-of-door girl, in stripes, checks and plain materials; for the girl who likes something "different" attractive materials come by the yard, to be made up, sweater coat fashion, with any colored collar and cuffs she may desire. No school outfit is complete without a suit of bloomers of serge or light-weight flannel for basket-ball, bar vaulting, and all the other gymnastics demanded of the healthy, athletic schoolgirl of today.

To wear with these sweaters and top coats there are round hats in woolen mixtures, with a short quill or stick-up by way of trimming, which defy snow, rain and all kinds of weather most satisfactorily.

Demand for the One-Piece Frock

It stands to reason that if the suit skirt is worn in the classroom, it will soon become shiny and shabby while the coat remains perfectly good; here is where the one-piece dress of serge or gabardine is most practical aside from its convenience and becomingness. There is nothing more suitable or comfortable than one of these simple frocks in some dark shade, with one of the new sashes or belts in a contrasting fabric, and collar and cuffs, or perhaps a guimpe or chemisette of organdy, voile or crepe de Chine. The wash-

"JUDGE WOODS MAY BRING SUIT AGAINST GAZETTE"

"Prosecution for Criminal Libel Likely to Follow Publication of Statement That 55 Per Cent. of His Decisions Were Reversed."

(Heading from Bedford Inquirer, September 3, 1915.)

Such a doggedly, niggardly, cowardly proceeding! Can it be possible that argument for Judge Woods has reached its zenith and the Judge has taken to the dishonorable and disreputable method shown by the Inquirer's article? If he approves the article he admits the weakness of any assertion of defense and the whole article conveys the idea that the 55% reversal is a fact because he seems to defend that assertion. There is no intention of damaging the character of Judge Woods. What we want to know is whether the Bedford Inquirer was correct in its implication that Judge Woods has been reversed in 55% of the appealed cases. Of course he couldn't be reversed on cases not carried up to the higher courts but if he be reversed on 55% of the cases carried to the Supreme Court and 55% of the cases carried to the Superior Court, it would be a reasonable conclusion to say that the same ratio would exist in the cases not taken up, provided they would be reviewed, and that is the rub. The poorer class of people cannot carry their cases up to any higher court. They must take the verdict in the lower court and they must suffer with a court's defections, inability, poor judgment and partiality. Can the poor people who are unfortunately haled into court have any confidence in a court who has such a damaging and disgraceful record as supported by the Bedford Inquirer in its columns of August 20, and commented on in the issue of The Gazette? We cannot see any damage to Judge Woods' character in any assertion. You cannot say that a child's character is bad when he doesn't pay any attention to the rules of the text or the arguments of his teacher in school. He is just stupid, listless, contrary, indifferent or spiteful. There is nothing wrong with the child's character, whatever. He is simply no account as a student.

teacher who doesn't pay any attention to the rules of the school board nor the fixed rules and methods of teaching nor the explanations of the child cannot be questioned in regard to his character, but he makes a mighty poor teacher.

Now, we will take the word "attention" in the article. Does he pay attention to the argument? We recall the cases in which the judge allowed the attorneys to plead their case for two hours or more, handing out the data they had out to the court and had spent much time and effort in the preparation of the case for and against. After they were through with the pleading, the Court reached in his pocket and pulled out his decision on the case. Can that be justice? A decision rendered before the argument is heard is the most damnable procedure ever perpetrated in any court. If the cases have anything to surpass that pass it along till we see its form. There is no justice, no attention, no regard for citations or precedents and one of the most disgraceful insults ever handed down to the Bedford Bar. Can you trust a court of that caliber? If you should be unfortunately haled into court can you have confidence in a court of such inclinations? Can the Bedford Bar stand up and defend such actions? Is that paying attention to the facts, argument and the law? If the court does that in one case, can you trust it in others? Where is reason?

We suppose the Bedford Inquirer will come along next week with an article that the Bedford Gazette has been sued. Why not sue the Inquirer? Why be partial? The rumor was argued as wide as its circulation by the Bedford Inquirer. Where is the reason in suing The Gazette? If Judge Woods has a burning desire in his breast to place the editor of the Bedford Gazette behind prison bars, let him go ahead. We can write his obituary there as well as at the editor's desk. Friends and relatives can come to Bedford and visit us at the house of detention. We consider the article in the Inquirer an affront, parallel to the actions of Judge Woods on the Bench.

We recall an instance when Judge Woods lost his temper on the bench and insulted Judge Longenecker by threatening to place him in jail, and ordered the Sheriff to take him into custody. Can the people of Bedford County stand for its aged, most advanced and respected citizen to be insulted like that? Every soldier in Bedford County should resent that as an insult to his fraternity. Can the people of Bedford County stand for its intelligence to be rebuked and chastised in such a manner?

We suppose Judge Woods fixed the matter up with Judge Longenecker but it was an insult to his friends as well as to the county. Who knows when he will repeat such insults? He is elected? He is in speech, argues with counsel, all and more which disqualify him for the exalted position of Judge of our Courts.

We have the happy consolation that if we are hailed into court, a disinterested Judge will sit on the case and we can have some comfort that we may be able to submit our innocence or guilt to a jury of twelve of our countrymen and not to an arbitrary judge.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Clearville

September 7—F. B. Adams and wife of Everett called on Sunday on Harvey Grubb at this place, who has been seriously ill for several weeks.

Rev D. G. Hetrick and family visited friends in Everett on Wednesday.

Rev. and Mrs. Slonaker, formerly of this place, but now of West End, called on friends in our village on Monday and returned to their home on Tuesday.

Mrs. D. C. Mundwiler and children, John, Odella and Mary, left Sunday evening for a week's sojourn in Cumberland and at Bedford.

Student John Hege, who supplied the Mt. Pleasant Lutheran Charge for several months, preached his last sermon here Saturday evening, and left Monday morning for the Lutheran Theological Seminary at Gettysburg, to resume his studies for another year. He is a Christian gentleman and made many friends while in our village.

On Wednesday Ira Dodson of Altoona joined his family who had been visiting in Clearville and Monroe Township for a month, and on Sunday they all returned to their home. On Saturday the Pleasant Union Sunday School held its annual picnic in the grove at the church. They were favored with a pleasant day and a good-sized crowd. Three visiting schools, a quartet from Mt. Zion and the Point Pleasant Band assisted with the music. Revs. J. R. Logue, G. M. Frowns and D. G. Hetrick delivered addresses.

The district Sunday School convention held in the Clearville M. E. Church on Sunday was well attended. There were three sessions: morning, afternoon and evening. In the morning M. H. Kramer of Hyndman, President of the County Association, and H. J. Wagoner, County Secretary, made addresses. In the afternoon A. M. Whetstone, Vice President, and Rev. M. J. Weaver, Honorary President, delivered addresses. In the evening the Secretary and President spoke. The addresses were all very helpful to the workers. A few thoughts: The old time Sunday School was for the children, but the modern Sunday School is for all, for everybody in the community and every one should be enrolled in one of the departments of the Sunday School. How can we inspire a greater interest in the work in which we are engaged? By doing a part of the work ourselves and by faith in the final outcome of this great movement. It is necessary then that we prepare ourselves for the work. How can we make a success of our work? By bringing into the Sunday School those who do not attend, by going out after them and preparing them to help themselves and to help others.

Thornton L. Imes and wife of Chaneyville and Chas. Fletcher and family of Chapman's Run were the guests of E. H. Blankley and family on Sunday.

The sick remain about the same. John Weimer sat on the porch a while today and Harvey Grubb appears to be resting easier. Golden.

William F. Easter
For County Commissioner

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for County Commissioner, and pledge myself to the Democratic voters of Bedford County, and pledge myself to support the ticket nominated.

For years I have been interested in public affairs, and I pledge myself, if elected, to work for the interest of all the people.

Being a practical stone mason, and having helped to build 14 bridges in this county, and having repaired a great many, I can and will give the county, if elected Commissioner, the benefit of my practical experience, and I shall insist upon having all work done thoroughly and economically. I shall favor the building of a bridge where it is deemed necessary by the taxpayers living in the vicinity of the proposed bridge.

As a farmer and taxpayer, I realize that the taxes are too high, and I pledge myself, if elected, to work for economy, efficiency, lower taxes (a 6 or 7 mill tax), and a square deal for all the people.

I ask for your vote and your influence. I am a Democrat, and have always been a worker in the party.

Bear in mind, I am "for the folks, not the factions."

Yours sincerely,

WILLIAM F. EASTER,
Bedford, Pa.

STRONG ENDORSEMENT OF JUDGE HUFF

Pioneer in "No-License" Campaign,
Has Stood the Test, Why Not Return Him?

When the Devil got sick, the Devil, a saint would be; But when he got well, it's "never a saint was he."

This old doggerel was never more applicable than just now in our Primary campaign for judges in this judicial district. When Demon Rum was in his glory and seemed to dominate business, politics and religion (not Christianity), any old thing, no matter how disreputable, was made use of to fill his coffers; but now that his supremacy has been challenged by an awakening people, and the near future gives promise of complete prohibition of this senseless and godless traffic, a more subtle course must be arranged. The effort to falsify both the words and character of the great and good Wesley, to bolster up the four crosses, was a fizzle. Then followed their fiendish effort to try to fool a bunch of suckers by classing with bar-keepers, that peerless exponent of every good and fearless fighter of all evil, the illustrious Abraham Lincoln, with like failure. Their killing of a few prohibitionists still failed to stem the growing sentiment against rum and now their latest move is evidence not only of their treacherous, wily purposes, but also their utter disregard of honor or decency in the trying to corrupt the conscience of the people to a level that can scarcely be thought of without a shudder. Your readers recall that in a former article in this county on this line, an article signed "A Mother" made a pitiful plea that the boys be "saved from the scourge of Prohibition, then threatening the town and county. She (?) started the conscience racket in this county, but we had the editor admit that it was a fake article, as were several others in the same paper, gotten up and paid for by the whisky trade; and by quick circulation of this fact, nullified their purpose.

The next move was to pretend to exemplify a conscientious adherence to that noble attribute of God, Justice, as it applied to the duties of a judge in granting or refusing liquor licenses. What a wonderful devotion to conscience, justice and good government these judicial patriots (parasites) display in serving their master. One super-pious judge says "If I were to refuse all licenses against which these remonstrances have been filed, simply for the reasons set forth, the Appellate Courts would reverse," and yet this is just what a good number of judges have done and not a single reversal of such refusal. And again listen to the bench—"I think it a dangerous practice to try to upset a law or render it of no effect by such procedure. That is what leads to anarchy, lynching and other disorders. Persons say the court should simply refuse a license without giving any reason, because the Supreme Court in such cases will not reverse. I cannot stifle my conscience so easily as that." Every poor, distressed, heart-broken saloon-keeper says "Amen."

But to the dismay of these conscientious judges a bomb was thrown into their camp by Judge Crissman, who had a conscience also, but not void of offense to the liquor side. He made a wholesale refusal on the ground of "No necessity." The saloon-men appealed and the court did, just what every judge knew it would do, sustain the lower court. Judge Crissman made no pre-election pledges and earlier granted licenses, but he saw a light that guides the conscience unerringly, a light that more judges would do well to follow. Since the Superior Court has plainly said that license is not at the option of the judge (which they all before knew) the saloonist finds it difficult to get judges who will use the silly, untruthful plea that "they must," before their informed constituents.

The people are seeing that Prohibition does prohibit, unless we foolishly vote the country dry and the court house wet. Even local prohibition has proven safer for the general good than license and the people are now pledging judicial candidates against license as they pledge them on other important issues. Something more effective must be done by the saloon interests to deceive the people, for only by deception can such a vile traffic exist; so they now use the conscience and justice racket in a different way, and apply it to our pledging the judges. (It seems all right for them to do so secretly.)

They express great "fear that the people have taken a perilous path under Reform and advise serious consideration as to the outcome." "That all such judges as a menace to good government and bringing the judiciary into contempt, that such pledge pre-judges the case and they will not be allowed to sit on such cases; that such would pull down the pillars of the temple of justice" and a lot more of the ear smacking dope, all bearing the mark of the liquor bureau. The mails are flooded and a paid press filled with these patriotic appeals and warnings to the public, the wording and expense all indicating that they are fathered by the liquor trust, which has its stool pigeons everywhere.

Judge Huff was among the first to publicly pledge against all liquor licenses. Do the people regard him as "a menace to good government?" Has he been prevented from sitting on such cases? Will you fail for such miserable dope as these great (?) legal lights are throwing to you? I don't think so. They knew the case against alcohol has been tried, that judgment in every intelligent, conscience court has decreed its suppression, that "the world is going dry, as Clinton Howard says, all God is waiting for now is for the church to catch up with the heathen." This subterfuge about pledging judges and their conscience twaddle seems about their last stand and yet when this dope fails, as fail it must, they will likely send out their dupes with some other worse dope to catch suckers. Will they get you? It's simply a case of the thief crying "stop thief" and characteristic of a trade that always fears to fight fair. It hardly seems thinkable that the people will be so long standing for this deceiver of men and morals. What are you going to do to it your ballot?

Vote for Judge Huff.

Thrift On The Farm

It takes brains as well as muscle to run a farm nowadays, and it is the keen and foresighted farmer that gets ahead. There is no better illustration of the possibilities of thrift on the farm than the frequent cases of renters who become owners by making the change from paying rent to paying interest on a mortgage and gradually paying off the debt. The ambitious farmer should never forget that a good bank like the First National Bank can be one of his best friends, and we cordially invite the farmers of this vicinity to make use of our savings as well as our commercial banking department. We pay 3% interest and compound same every six months on savings accounts. Won't you open an account for yourself or some member of your family the next time you come to town? Think it over.

First Dose Ends Indigestion, Heartburn, or Gas on Stomach

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from indigestion, dyspepsia or out-of-order stomach is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Tonoline Tabs.

People with weak stomachs should take Tonoline Tablets occasionally, and there will be no more indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, sour risings, gas on stomach, or belching of undigested food, headaches, dizziness or sick stomach; and besides, what you eat will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour, out-of-order stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after taking Tonoline Tablets.

Go to your druggist and get a $1 box of Tonoline Tablets and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite, and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh, and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. Tonoline Tabs freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

Tonoline Tablets cost $1.00 for a 50 days' treatment. At druggists or mailed by American Proprietary Co., Boston, Mass.—Adv. 19 Sept. 4t.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—At a vestry meeting of the Market Square church Gail Sargent listens to a discussion about the sale of the church tenements to Edward E. Allison, local traction king, and when asked her opinion of the church by Rev. Smith Boyd, says it is apparently a lucrative business enterprise.

CHAPTER II.—Allison takes Gail riding in his motor car. When he suggests she is entitled to rest on the laurels of his achievements, she asks the disturbing question: "Why?"

CHAPTER III.—Gail, returning to her Uncle Jim's home from her drive with Allison, finds cold disapproval in the eyes of Rev. Smith Boyd, who is calling there.

CHAPTER IV.—At a boisterous party Gail finds the world uncomfortably full of men, and Allison thinks it necessary to advise her as to matrimonial probabilities.

CHAPTER V.—Allison starts a campaign for consolidation and control of the entire transportation system of the world.

CHAPTER VI.—Gail becomes popular and Aunt Helen thinks it necessary to advise her as to matrimonial probabilities.

CHAPTER VII.—Allison gains control of transcontinental traffic and arranges to absorb the Vedder court tenement property of Market Square church.

CHAPTER VIII.—Gail visits Vedder Court and meeting Boyd there, tells him that the cathedral Market Square church proposes to build will be out of profits from squallor.

CHAPTER IX.—Gail becomes the center of a magnetic attraction for the men of her Aunt's social set.

"I'm so with pleasure," promised Gail and Cunningham turned to her with a grateful smile.

"I would prefer to show you the original," he ventured.

"Oh, look at them tuning their drums," cried Gail, and he thought that she had entirely missed his hint, that the keenest delight in his life would be to lead her through the Louvre, and from thence to a perspective of picture galleries, dazzling with all the hues of the spectrum, and as long as life!

He had other things which he wanted to say, but he calculatingly reserved them for the day of the picture viewing, when he would have her exclusive attention; so, through the dance, he talked of trifles far from his heart. It was a nice chat, too.

Dick Rodley was on hand with the last stroke of the music, to claim her for his dance. By one of those waves of unspoken agreement Gail was being "rushed." It was her night, and she enjoyed it to the full.

Van Ploon danced with her, danced conscientiously, keeping perfect time to the music, avoiding, with practiced adroitness, every possible pocketing, or even hem contacts with surrounding couples, and acquitting himself of lightly turned observations at the expiration of about every seventy seconds. He quite approved of her; extraordinarily so. He had never met a girl who approached so near the thousand per cent grade of perfection by all the blue ribbon points.

It was while she was enjoying her second waltz dance with Van Ploon that Gail, swinging with him near the south windows, heard the hoak of an auto horn, and near the conclusion of the dance, saw Allison standing in the doorway of the ballroom, with his hands in his pockets, watching her with a smile. Her eyes lighted with pleasure, and she nodded gayly to him over Van Ploon's tall shoulder. When the dance stopped she was on the far side of the room, and was instantly the center of a buzzing little knot of dancers, from out of which carefree laughter radiated like visible flashes of musical sound. She emerged from the group with the arms of two bright-eyed girls around her waist, and met Allison sturdily breathing the currents which had set towards the conservatory, the drawing rooms, or the buffet.

"Nobody has saved me a dance," he complained.

Point

September 6.—Miss J. M. Cable and daughter Dessie spent the time between trains on Saturday at Roaring Spring, where they visited their daughter and sister, Miss Jennie Cable, who is a trained nurse in the hospital at that place.

Ray King of Greensburg is spending a few days here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. King.

Joseph Roundbush of near South Fork is visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. McArthur.

Edward Brawley, John Lyr, Robert Drant and C. Piper Smith of Bladock motored to Bedford Springs on Saturday. They stopped here on their return and had dinner with Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Smith on Sunday. Miss Edna Beckley, brother Walter, and R. C. Smith, Jr., of Mount were also guests of the Smith family on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Callahan and son attended the Catfish reunion on Saturday. They report a good time and large crowd present.

"Nobody expected you until tomorrow," Gail smilingly returned, introducing him to the girls. "I'll beg you one of my dances from Ted or somebody."

"One will be enough for me, unless you can steal me some more of your own," he told her, glancing down at her, from coiffure to blue pointed slippers, with calm appreciation. "You are looking great tonight," and his gaze came back to rest in her glowing eyes. Her fresh color had been heightened by the excitement of the evening, but now an added flush swept lightly over her cheeks, and passed.

"I'll see what I can do," she speculated, looking at her dance card. "I think one is all you get."

"I'm lucky even to have that," declared Allison in content. "The fourth dance down. That will just give me time to punish the buffet. I'm hungry as a bear. I started out here without my dinner."

Her next partner came in search of her presently, and the music struck up, and Allison, nodding to his many acquaintances jovially, for he was in excellent humor in these days of building, and planning, and clearing ground for an entirely new superstructure of life, circled around to the dining room, where he performed savage feats at the buffet. Soon he was out again, standing quietly at the edge of things, and watching Gail with keen pleasure, both when she danced and when, in the intermissions, the gallants of the party gravitated to her like needles to a magnet. Her popularity pleased him, and flattered him. Suddenly he caught sight of Eldridge Babbitt, a middle-aged man who was watching a young woman with the same pleasure Allison was experiencing in the contemplation of Gail.

"Just the man I wanted to see," announced Allison, making his way to Babbitt. "I have a new freightage proposition for the National Dairy Products consolidation."

Babbitt brightened visibly. He had been missing something keenly these past two days, and now all at once he realized what it was: business.

"I can't see any possible new angle," returned Babbitt cautiously, and with a backward glance at the dashing young Mrs. Babbitt. He headed instinctively for the library.

Laughingly Gail finished her third dance down. She had enjoyed several sparkling encounters in passing with Dick Rodley, and she was buoyantly exhilarated as she started to stroll from the floor with her partner. She had wanted to find cherub-cheeked Marion Kenneth, and together they walked through the conservatory, and the dining room, and the deserted billiard room, with its bright light on the green cloth and all the rest of the rooms in dimness. There was a narrow space at one point between the chairs and the table, and it unexpectedly wedged them into close contact. With a sharp intake of his breath, the fellow, a ruddy-faced, thick-necked, full-lipped young man who had followed her with his eyes all evening, suddenly turned, and caught her in his embrace.

Gail, turning, hurried out of the side door to the veranda. Her knees were trembling, but the fresh, cold air steadied her, and she walked the full length of the wide porch, trying instinctively to forget the sickening humiliation. She was near a window, and, advancing a step, she looked in. It was the library, and Allison sat there, so clean and wholesome looking, with his pink shaven face and his white evening waistcoat, and his dark hair beginning to sprinkle with gray at the temples. He was so sturdy and so strong and so dependable looking, as he sat earnestly talking with Babbitt. Gail hurried to the front door and rang the bell.

"Hello, Gail," greeted the cheery voice of Allison, as she came in. "My dance next, isn't it?"

His voice was so good, so comforting, so reassuring.

"I think so," she replied, standing hesitantly in the doorway, and thankful that the lights were snuffed in this room.

Allison drew the memorandum pad toward him, and rose.

"By the way, there's one thing I forgot to tell you, Babbitt, and it's rather important." He hesitated and glanced toward the door. "You'll excuse me just half a minute, won't you, Gail?"

She had noticed that assumption of intimate understanding in him before, and she had secretly admired it. Now it was a comfort and a joy.

"Surely," she granted, and passed on in to the library alcove, a sheltered nook where she was glad to be alone, to rescue herself from the whirl of anger, and indignation, and humiliation—above all, humiliation—which had swept around her. Her face was hot and cold by turns, and she was almost on the point of crying, in spite of her constantly reiterated self-admonishment that she must control herself here, when Allison came to the door of the alcove.

"All right, Gail," he said laconically. She felt suddenly weary, but she rose and joined him. When she slipped her hand in his arm, strong, and warm, and pulsing, she was aware of a thrill from it, but the thrill was just restfulness.

"You look a little tired," judged the practical Allison, as they strolled, side by side, into the hall, and he patted the slender hand which lay on his arm.

"Not very," she lightly replied, and unconsciously she snuggled her hand more comfortably into its resting place. A little sigh escaped her lips, deep-drawn and fluttering. It was a sigh of content.

CHAPTER X.

"Gentlemen, There Is Your Empire!" The seven quiet gentlemen who sat with Allison at his library table, followed the concluding flourish of his hand toward the map on the wall, and either nodded or blinked appreciatively.

The red line on his map was complete now, a broad, straight line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and to it were added, on either side, irregular, angling red lines like the legs of a centipede, the feeders of the various systems which were under control of the new Atlantic-Pacific railroad.

"That's a brilliant piece of engineering, Allison," observed huge Richard Haverman, by way of pleasant comment, and he glanced admiringly at Allison after his eye had roved around the little company of notables. The feat of bringing these seven men together at a specific hour was greater than having consolidated the brilliant new Atlantic-Pacific railroad.

"Let's get to the details," barked a voice with the volume of a St. Bernard. It came from Arthur Grandin, the head of the Union Fuel company, which controlled all the wood and coal in the United States, and all the oil in the world. His bald spot came exactly on a level with the back of his chair, and he wore a fierce mustache.

"I'm putting in the Atlantic-Pacific as my share of the pool, gentlemen," explained Allison. "My project, as I have told you, is to make this the main trunk, the vertebrae as it were, of the International Transportation company. I have consolidated with the A.P. the Municipal Transportation company, and I have put my entire fortune in it, to lay it on the table absolutely unencumbered."

He threw down the Atlantic-Pacific railroad and the Municipal Transportation company in the form of a one-sheet typewritten paper.

"We'd better appoint someone to look after the legal end of things," suggested the towering Haverman, whose carelessly lounging attitude contrasted oddly with his dignified long beard.

"I'll take care of it," said W. T. Chisholm of the Majestic Trust company, and drawing the statement in front of him, he set a paperweight on it.

"The first step is not one of incorporation," went on Allison. "Before that is done there must be a railroad system in the United States."

Smooth-shaven old Joseph G. Clark nodded his head. There was but one cereal company in the United States, and the Standard, in the beginning, had been the smallest. Two of the heads of rival concerns were now in Clark's employ, one was a pauper, and three were dead. He disliked the pauper.

Robert E. Taylor, of the American Textiles company, a man who had quite disproved the theory that constructive business genius was confined to the North, smoothed his gray mustache reflectively, with the tip of his middle finger, all the way out to its long point.

"I can see where you will tear up the east and west traffic situation to a considerable extent," he thoughtfully commented; "but without the important north and south main trunks you cannot make a tight web."

Allison went over to his wall map, with a step in which there was the spring of a boy. A. L. Vance of the United States Supplies company, which controlled beef, sugar and practically all other food products, except those mighty necessities under the sways of the Standard Cereal company and Eldridge Babbitt's National Dairy Products consolidation, studied the buoyant Allison with a puzzled expression. He had seen Allison grow to care-burdened manhood, and suddenly Ed seemed twenty years younger. Only Eldridge Babbitt knew the secret of this miraculous rejuvenescence. Babbitt had married late in life; a beautiful young woman!

"The key to the north and south situation is here," said Allison, and he drew a firm, swift, green line down across the United States, branching at each end. "George Dalrymple will be here in half an hour, and by that time I trust we may come to some agreement."

"It depends on what you want," boomed Arthur Grandin, who, sitting beside the immense Haverman, looked as if that giant had shrunk him by his mere proximity.

"Traight to begin with," stated All-son, resuming his place at the head of the table, but not his seat. "You gentlemen represent the largest freightage interests in the United States. You all know your relative products, and yet, in order to grasp this situation completely, I wish to enumerate them. Babbitt's National Dairy Products consolidation can swing the shipment of every ounce of butter, cream, cheese, eggs and poultry handled in this country; Clark's Standard Cereal company, wheat, corn, oats, rice, barley, malt, flour, every ounce of breadstuffs or cereal goods, grown on American soil; Haverman, the Amalgamated Metals Constructive company, every pound of iron, lead and copper, and every ton of ore, from the moment it leaves the ground until it appears as an iron web in a lofty sky or spans a river; Grandin, the Union Fuel company, coal and wood, from Alaska to Pennsylvania, with oil and all its enormous by-products; Taylor, the American Textiles company, wool, cotton, flax, the raw and finished material of every thread of clothing we wear, or any other textile fabric we use except silks; Vance, the United States Supplies company, meat, sugar, fruit, the main blood and sinew builders of the country. Gentlemen, give me the freightage controlled by your six companies, and I'll toss the rest of the country's freightage to a beggar."

"You forgot Chisholm," Babbitt reminded him, and Banker Chisholm's white mutton-chops turned pink from the appreciation which glowed in his ruddy-veined face.

"Allison was quite right," returned big Haverman with a dry smile. "The freightage income on money is an item scarcely worth considering."

"Give the Atlantic-Pacific this freight, and, inside of two years, the entire business of the United States, with all its ramifications, will be merged in one management, and that management ours. We shall not need to absorb, nor purchase, a single railroad until it is bankrupt."

"Sensible idea," Allison approved. "Clark of the Standard Cereal company. It's a logical proposition which I had in mind years ago."

"Allison's stroke of genius, it seems to me, consists in getting us together," smiled Haverman, hanging his arm over the back of his chair.

Banker Chisholm leaned forward on the table, and stroked his round chin reflectively. "There would be some disorganization, and perhaps financial disorder, in the first two years," he considered; "but the railroads are already harassed too much by the government to thrive under competition, and, in the end, I believe this proposed centralization would be the best thing for the interests of the country," wherein Chisholm displayed that he was a vestryman of Market Square church wherever he went.

"What is your proposition?" the self-assertion necessitated by his diminutive size, seemed pompous, but was not. No pompous man could have merged the wood, coal and oil interests, and, having merged them, swung them over his own shoulder.

Allison's answer consisted of one word.

"Consolidation," he said.

"There was a moment of silence, while these men absorbed that simple idea, and glanced speculatively, not at Allison, but at each other. They were kings, these heads of mighty corporations, whose emissaries carried their sovereignties into the farthest corners of the earth. Like friendly kings, they had helped each other in the protection of their several domains; but this was another matter.

"That's a large proposition, Ed," stated Vance, very thoughtfully. All sense of levity had gone from this meeting. They had come, as they thought, to promote a large mutual interest, but not to understand a Frankenstein. "I did not intend your project to be so comprehensive. I fancied your idea to be that the various companies represented here, with Chisholm as financial controller, should take a mutual interest in the support of the Atlantic-Pacific, for the purpose of consolidating the railroad interests of the country under one management, thereby serving our own transportation needs."

"Very well put, Vance," approved Taylor, smoothing his pointed mustache.

"That is a mere logical development of the railroad situation," returned Allison. "If I had not cemented this direct route, someone would have made the consolidation you mention within ten years, for the entire railroad situation has been disorganized since the death of three big men in that field; and the scattered holdings would be, and are, an easy prey for anyone vitally interested enough to invade the industry. I have no such minor proposition in mind. I propose, with the Atlantic-Pacific as a nucleus, to first, as I have said, bring the financial terminals of every mile of railroad in the United States into one central office. With this I then propose to combine the National Dairy Products consolidation, the Standard Cereal company, the Amalgamated Metals Constructive company, the Union Fuel, American Textiles, the United States Supplies, and the stupendous financial interests swayed by the banks tributary to the Majestic Trust company. I propose to weld these gigantic concerns into one corporation, which shall be the mightiest organization the world has ever known. Beginning with the control of transportation, it will control all food, all apparel, all construction materials, all fuel. From the shoes on his feet to the roof over his head, every man in the United States of America, from laborer to president, shall pay tribute to the International Transportation company. Gentlemen, if I have dreamed big, it is because I have dealt with men who deal only in large dreams. What I propose is an empire greater than that ever swayed by any monarch in history. We eight men, who are here in this room, can build that empire with a scratch of a pen, and can hold it against the assaults of the world!"

His voice rang as he finished, and Babbitt looked at him in wonder. Allison had always been a strong man, but now, in this second youth, he was an Antaeus springing fresh from the earth. There was a moment's lull, and then a nasal voice drew into the silence.

"Allison; it was the voice of old Joseph G. Clark, who had built the Standard Cereal company out of one wheat elevator; "who is to be the monarch of your new empire?"

For just a moment Allison looked about him. Vastly different as these men were, from the full-bearded Haverman to the smooth-shaven old Joseph G. Clark, there was some one expression which was the same in every man, and that expression was mastery. These men, by the sheer force of their personality, by the sheer virility of their purposes, by the sheer dogged persistence which balks at no obstacle and hesitates at no foe, had fought and struggled and throttled their way to the top, until they stood head and shoulders above all the strong men of their respective domains, safe from protest or dispute of sovereignty, because none has risen strong enough to do them battle. They were the undefeated champions of their classes, and the life of every man in that group was an epic! Who was to be monarch of the new empire? Allison answered that question as simply as he had the others.

"The best man," he said.

There had been seven big men in America. Now there were eight. They all recognized that.

"Of course," went on Allison, "my proposition does not assume that any man here will begin by relinquishing control of his own particular branch of the International Transportation company; sugar, beef, iron, steel, oil and the other commodities will all be under their present handling; but each branch will so support and benefit the other that the position of the consolidation itself will be impregnable against competition or the assaults of government. The advantages of control, collection and distribution, are so vast that they far outweigh any possible question of personal aggrandizement."

"Don't hedge, Allison," barked Arthur Grandin. "You expressed it right in the first place. You're putting it up to us to step out of the local championship class, and contend for the big belt."

"The prize isn't big enough," pronounced W. T. Chisholm, as if he had decided for them all. As he flitted his calling, he was slower minded than the rest. There were few quick turns in banking.

The Fable of the Anti-Gambling Crusaders

Once upon a time in almost any city there thrived a little bunch of perfectly nice women who raved and shouted continuously at the city officials for permitting gambling within the city's gates. To be sure no accusations were made, because the ladies did not know who was gambling, where they were gambling, how they were gambling, or when they were gambling. But they just knew there must be gambling going on somewhere. Of course they knew their husbands sometimes bet a little on a ball game and that their children played marbles for "keeps," but they only did that for fun.

And then one day the city's arm of the law stumbled into a poker game. The players were arrested and the lady crusaders sent for the State's attorney. All of the gamblers, save one, had money to pay off. The lone one was sent to jail for ninety days to "lay it out." The day after the trial one of the crusader's husbands cleaned up seventeen hundred dollars on the stock exchange, and that night the crusader, herself, brought home a lovely cut-glass bowl that she had won at a tea party.

Cement

You can make at home and it is cheaper if wanted in large quantities. This recipe makes nearly two gallons, but of course, you can make it up in as small an amount as you like, mixing the ingredients in the same proportions. White glue, 4 pounds, dry white lead 1½ pounds, isinglass ½ lb, salt water 1 gallon, alcohol 1 quart, white varnish ½ pint. Dissolve the glue and isinglass in the water by a very gentle heat. Stir in the lead, mix the alcohol and varnish together and then stir in the rest. Keep in a cool place closely covered. One-sixth of these quantities really makes quite enough to last the ordinary household for a long time, but making in small amounts it is cheaper and more satisfactory to buy one of the good reliable cements that are already on the market.

There Is No Question but that indigestion and the distressed feeling which always goes with it can be promptly relieved by taking a Rexall Dyspepsia Tablet before and after each meal. 25c a box. Frank W. Jordan, Jr.

Sixty-four years ago this month gold was discovered in California. In a short time thereafter Easterners had carried it all on the other side of the Rockies, and now California is putting on a couple of expositions in an effort to get it back. It has been but sixty-eight years ago this month, too, since the United States went down and took Mexico City, and now it looks like history would have to repeat itself, as it has a habit of doing.

The twenty-third the moon will be full and Autumn will begin; the housewife, fearful of a frost, will bring her garden in. Then piccalilli, chili-sauce, preserves and butters too will fill the jars they filled last year, and many that are new. It seems incredible that we could ever eat it all, but mother knows how much it takes—she does it every fall. The fields of corn are ripening, the streams are running low; the summer wanes—but let'er wane—there's be no yard to mow. Another thing—we soon can dress in comfort and in peace without a feeling that we are but melting chunks of grease.

Naming the Country Place
People are getting over the idea that it is an affectation to name the country place, and to put a sign at the gateway declaring it. Why this feeling should ever have gained ground is hard to explain, unless it was because some of the early advocates of the plan used silly names. Across the water, and especially in England, the names of country places are handed down for generations. By all means, name the suburban or country home; but be sure to select a name that is appropriate and not freakish. Your home and its grounds should have individuality, and their naming adds to that quality.—The Countryside Magazine.

INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 12

ELIJAH'S FLIGHT AND RETURN.

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 19:8-18 (Read entire chapter).
GOLDEN TEXT—Be still and know that I am God. Ps. 46:10.

Elijah's great victory over the prophets of Baal which resulted in their extermination is followed by a most notable prayer service on the top of Mount Carmel (18:42-45). So confident was the prophet that at the arising of "a little cloud," he hastily summoned the feasting king and urges his departure to his home, "that the rain stop thee not." The God whom Elijah had honored so signally that day laid his hand upon the prophet (18:46) so that he was able to outrun the king's horses to the entrance of Jezreel. There he is met by a messenger of the wicked queen (19:2) who had been the protector and provider of the slain prophets. Getting his eyes off of God and seeing only a vile and wicked woman Elijah not only ran for his life out of Ahab's domains but also "went a day's journey into the wilderness" to the protecting shade of a juniper tree (v. 4).

I. The Discouraged Prophet, vv. 4-8. Old and young, great and small, we all have our periods of discouragement and frequently despair. Christian's encounter with Giant Despair appeals to us all for it is so true to life. At Carmel, Elijah controlled the king; in his palace at Jezreel, Jezebel soon shattered his good resolutions, if he had any. We must recall that it was her prophets Elijah had destroyed. There is a suggestion in the fact that Elijah did not enter her presence (18:46). Yonder in the wilderness, his Gethsemane, Elijah prayed a vastly different sort of prayer than upon Mount Carmel. Jezebel is still in power. Heathenism is not overthrown, his efforts had been but trying to "dam Niagara with bulrushes."

No one who has ever heard the oratorio "Elijah" sung will ever forget the bitter agony of "It is enough." The prophet who alone had been exalted to the heights was alone capable of sounding such a depth of human despair. The sources of his discouragement were his physical condition, his loneliness, inactivity, mental reaction and a feeling that his cause was lost.

God's first remedy was to feed his fainting servant and then give him a task to perform, viz., a journey to Mount Horeb (Mount of God), for God loved him just as truly now as previously at Carmel. In this new strength Elijah went "forty days" (v. 8, 1 Pet. 2:2).

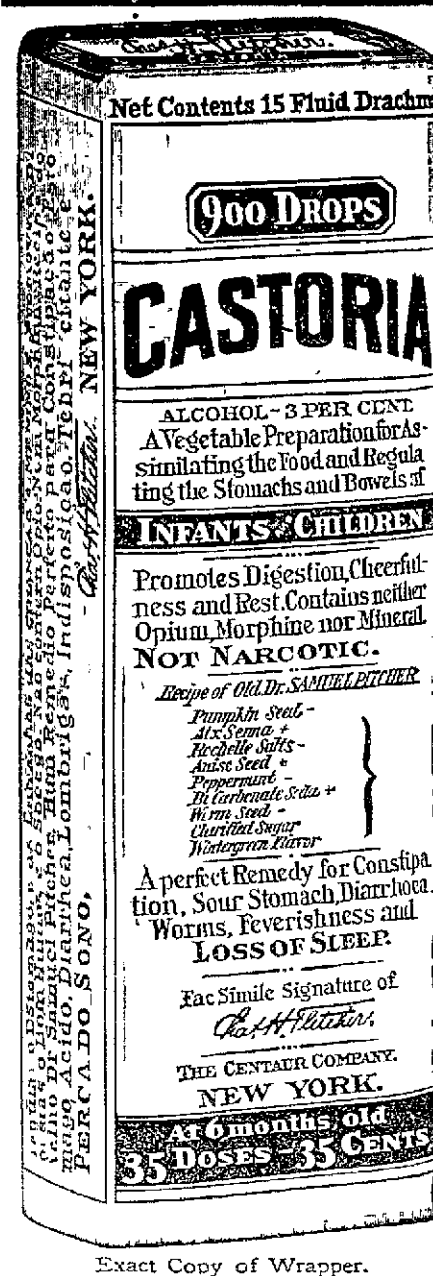

II. The Encouraging God, vv. 9-13. God's second remedy was to give Elijah his word through this time it suggested reproof. "What doest thou here?" Elijah is out of place. In reply he begins to rehearse his loyalty to God, and how bad the others were and then in seeming petulance he adds, "and they seek my life." "I only," are the words of the selfish man and when Elijah used them he too was a backslidden servant. It is true that there was great apostasy in Israel but the prophet was far from being the only true servant remaining (See 18:4; 20:13; 22:35, 41; 22:8). This is a favorite way the Evil One has for paralyzing our efforts. There is no evidence but that the 7,000 were as brave, certainly at that moment more so, than Elijah. God then continued his treatment by giving the prophet a vision of himself and of his methods for advancing his kingdom. A series of symbols made the truth plainer and more impressive than words alone could possibly have done. Leaving the protecting cave, Elijah first met a wind which "rent mountains," a type of Elijah's past activity. This was not God's chief power nor method. The mighty wind which destroys is as nothing compared to the silent forces which create.

III. The Result, vv. 14-18. As a sovereign remedy God now sets before Elijah three definite tasks to perform. Elijah still speaks of his faithfulness as though the success of The Cause depended upon him. The man who assumes that attitude in the work of God's kingdom will, like Elijah, soon be set aside. Elijah's first task was to avoid Israel and go to Damascus and "anoint"—set apart for special service—Hazael (v. 17), who was to be the instrument of punishing Israel. His next task was to find Jehu, the commander in chief of Ahab's army, and set him aside to be the king, not immediately but to be in training for that office.

Elijah's work is now not that of fire and wind, but of the "still small voice." To others is delegated the more spectacular tasks which these typify.

In this connection (v. 17) those are strange words, "shall Elisha say." To fully understand them we must be familiar with that prophet's life and work, also with that accomplished by Jehu. (See II Kings 2:23, 24; Hos. 4:6; Isa. 11:6.)

Elijah's third task was to appoint his successor and surely no harder task ever comes to any of us than to turn over our work to another.

FORD WILL START PEACE CAMPAIGN

Says He Will Devote His Wealth to Fighting Against All War—Is Against a Large Army.

Detroit, Mich., September 7.—Denouncing the advocates of military preparedness as instigators of a movement tending to lead the United States into the path of militarism and eventually to involve this country in war, Henry Ford announces his intention of using his wealth in a campaign for universal peace.

"I will do anything in my power to prevent murderous, wasteful war in America and the whole world; to fight this spirit which is now felt in the free and peaceful air of the United States, the spirit of militarism, mother to the cry of 'preparedness'—preparedness, the root of all war.

An Inheritance of Peace

"I have prospered much, but I am ready to give much to end this constant, wasteful 'preparation.' Not by building palaces of peace, not by inspiring fearful peace by powerful armament, but by teaching the men, women and children of America that war does not threaten us, that the fullness of peace is their inheritance, not the burden of militarism, with its heavy hand that curbs liberty, and its foul sustenance upon the blood, the labor, and the toil-earned happiness and goods of the workers. 'This I will make a world work for all the world cries for peace, and there can be no peace while there remains one set of these militaristic parasites who encourage war and who damn all whose idea of patriotism and love of their fellow man does not call for arming brother against brother.

Will Make No Shells

"I could today make vast sums from warfare if I so chose, but it would be better to die a pauper than that anything I have helped to make, or that any thought, word, or act of mine should be used for the furtherance of this slaughter.

"The isolation of the United States is a perfect safeguard against an invasion, and if this fact would not prevent a landing of hostile armies the very vastness of the country and the enormous population would make the attempt futile.

"The advice of militarists on the needs of a vast army is about the same as the advice of a group of professional gamblers would be in the framing of the civil laws. The only difference is that the former would gamble with human lives and the peace and prosperity of the nation; they plead for 'national honor; when they mean 'personal glorification' or 'blood money.'"
